Wichita Pounds Goodwin and game Wins in Seventh.

Team Goes to Pieces at Critical Stage, While Minors Find Goodwin Easy-Cross, Schaffy, and Perrine Among the Offenders-Isbell Brothers Do Stunts for the Winners.

to bat first, so that Washington could save time by not having to bat in the the chickings before, &c. Not only did Goodwin balloon in the seventh and allow five hits for eight runs, but the entire team behind him went to pieces, and the worst possible exhibition of minor league ball was furnished by the Capital tourists. Even old reliable Lave Cross dropped one squarely in his hands, and this, in fact, was re sponsible for four of the runs, as had he been on the job Wichita's accumulation in the seventh inning would have been four instead of eight tallies.

Coach O'Hara, during the practice be-ing Stahl what ailed him, but he made Goodwin added to the confusion by giving fore the game, had every confidence in the a base on balls and completely losing his ability of his proteges to win the game, now alarming, and though evidently trya baryon on a state of the stat After many trials and tribulations, mixed with some decent hitting, Wichita had garnered two runs when the fatal seventh began. A. Isbell, brother of the seventh began. A. Isbell, brother of the celebrated Frank Isbell, of the Chicago world's champions, opened with a pop fly to short. Nichols hit to left, Bayliss, who batted for Speer, drew a pass, Milan hit to Perrine, who threw it straight into the hands of Cross at third, but the veteran dropped the ball, and all were safe. McLears hit to center, scored Nichols, and Bayliss, and put Milan on third. Helling was an easy infield out, and the Helling was an easy infield out, and the rective fast aggregation it is. Smith, at hit to Perrine, who threw it straight into the hands of Cross at third, but the veteran dropped the ball, and all were safe. McLears hit to center, scored Nichols, and Bayliss, and put Milan on third. Helling was an easy infield out, and the side would have been retined right there, but Cross blundered, and Milan scored the fourth run.

Frank Isbell, who was in the city because of sickness in his family and had volunteered to play second for Wichita, hit a grounder to Schlaffy at deep first, isay ran like the wind to first, Goodwin was not so breezy, and Schlaffy was overconfident. Result, the ball to the bleachers and Isbell came home on a single by Annis.

Then came the crowning shame. Young Isbell, who is not a bit like his brother, in baseball ability, as far as can be judged on his general work, hit a clean triple tright center. Holland and Annis romped in making a grand total of eight runs. This was too much, and Goodwin was chased in favor of Graham, who caught Isbell, playing off first, retring the side. That made the score lot to 9, and so it remained to the end of the chapter.

spoke to Jimmie Collins, his roommate, about the outlook for a good day for save time by not having to bat in the BUFF AND BLUE LOSE GAME about the outlook for a good day for ninth inning. It was a case of counting BUFF AND BLUE LOSE GAME practice. He seemed to be in fine spirits, dressed himself with more than usual and went down to breakfast and ate a hearty meal. An hour later he returned to his room while the members of the team were dressing for practice, and complained to Collins that he was not feeling well. He was apparently in a tremor, as though from a chill, and Collins asked what was the matter.

Stahl's Last Words, Stahl made a half-intelligible reply that he was racked with pain, or something to that effect, and staggered to the bed
